...for saying the

assertions made, if not challenged by him in form of law, are true in substance and in fact. The Bulletin is not able to devote sufficient space to reproduce the series of articles in full, it therefore gives extracts which seem to bring out the salient points in regard to the Prune Growers' Association.

The management of the California Prune and Apricot Growers, Inc., which has been under attack and several times charged with dishonesty during the last four years, is now facing some serious specific accusations preferred by a large group of determined growers, under the leadership of Judge J. R. Welch of the Superior Court of Santa Clara county, who, himself,

The California Prune and Apricot Growers Inc. was organized in 1917 with chief place of business in San Jose. Its formation was primarily an effort on the part of the growers of prunes and apricots to eliminate middlemen and independent packers in the handling and sale of their dried products. By cooperative action through maintenance of a central sales agency they planned to obtain a fairer proportion of the price paid for their products.

Unfortunately, however, the management has been far from satisfactory. Charges of misuse of funds have been common. The association was organized on a basis where all members interested were to be invited. But the members soon learned that the management had organized a hierarchy, doing as they pleased with the money received from the sale of fruits delivered under the terms of the individual contracts and refusing all information when questioned by the members. Committees of grower members have been formed to investigate the officers of the association, but they are seeking information with great blank refusal.

During all these months the members of the board of directors were fully aware of repeated charges of dishonesty against Messrs. Coykendall and Dunlap and Mrs. Wallace. They not only refused to act but would not even accept, in the truth or otherwise of the accusations. They repeatedly passed resolutions of confidence in the accused officers, thereby persistently upholding a management which was believed by many persons to be corrupt.

A little over a year ago, Judge J. E. Welch, of the Superior Court of Santa Clara County, who is himself a grower of prunes and apricots, and whose prunes

Auditors Denounce the Management
This report when compiled was a scathing arraignment of the management of the association, showing misappropriation of funds and embezzlement and giving instances where the personal interests of the management had been served to the disadvantage and pecuniary loss of the grower members. Where the management had performed useful services the report set the facts forth in proper form and gave credit where it seemed to be due.

In the purchasing of these parcels the properties were appraised in all instances by the same appraiser, one of the directors, Montemery and some who figured in other instances, apparently refused to appraise this warehouse at an amount less than $10,000. Montemery said he would not give any figure but would pass the buck" up to the board of directors.

After a brief lapse of time Montemery came to the board of directors, after giving the official minutes to the board of directors, first sitting as a committee of the whole, and then as the "board," and then the "Board of Directors of the Growers' Packing and Warehousing Association to pay this infraction from the pockets of the growers into the hands of the warehousemen."

It should be noted that the same individuals are directors in both corporations, and by sitting as a committee of the whole, they cleverly officiated in these

This is a large sum but what it actually did cost was $2,091,377, an enormously inflated sum, or a difference of $1,288,839, which should have been paid the growers on the 1921 crop.

There is another matter that the grower members would like a little more information about: their final checks in full settlement for their 1919 prunes accompanied by a letter saying "enclosed you will find check in final settlement for your 1919 prune deliveries." An official statement dated in December 1920, made to banks, contained the item of $108,990 as value for 1919 prunes on hand.

"competitive" than under "co-operations, so-called; that competition was the reason; the only reason. There have been no other.

"The marketing to the world of the grain of the Canadian West is an inconceivably more difficult enterprise than the sale of the household requirements to the farmer that produces the wheat. The difference between the two classes of business is there any general diffusion of knowledge of the vast variety of circumstances affecting the European demand for wheat, and the quantity that can be secured in any one week and the price at which it can be obtained. The conditions that govern international trade in wheat, storage and transportation are not generally understood, nor the various difficulties that arise from time to time, such, for example, as the present steamship hold-up on the coast of Africa.

The wheat price was one cent lower Saturday than it was on that date last year. This is a disappointment in which everyone shares naturally every avenue by which better prices can be secured is being explored. Hence the pool proposal, and the approval with which we met on the principle that "Things can't be worse" and they might be better. Let's take a chance.

Unfortunately the wheat pool proposal is for a certainty and without any element of cut at least one-third off the paying and buying power of the farmer so far as this crop is concerned; with no assurance that the loss for this year will ever be recovered. The fact that Mr. Spence suggested as the first principle would constitute the first or delivery payment must be borrowed from the banks on the basis of the wheat as delivered. It is fair to assume that two-thirds of the current market price be as much as the banks would be willing to advance to the pool under all the circumstances—plus enough for salaries and current expenses generally. Therefore two-thirds of the net value of his wheat is all that the farmer would during the coming fall and winter. But Alberta farmers sign the pool contract delivering their wheat, that would mean a million dollars in circulation during the fall and winter. A difference of 25 million less money in circulation under the present financial conditions must mean doubt not hundreds of business failures that would occur if the full value of the crop went into circulation.

times stake his whole fortune on the turn of a card; but the man of business plays low, and stakes that he can afford to lose. If he cannot afford to lose he doesn't play.

It is generally accepted as a fact that a small price difference between cost and selling price of wheat is very slight. It would probably be fair to assume that two-thirds of the present market price will not much more than pay the cost of production.

The wheat pool means that during at least one crop year the farmer and the business of the country that depends on him will be running with two-thirds steam in the boilers instead of full head. And that, when a full head means such low pressure that the wheels are just turning, with little power behind them. A

COLUMBIAN DISCUSSION

The home of Mrs. John White was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, August 18th. The bride was Miss Marie White, daughter of H. B. Dickinson, of Vancouver. She united in marriage to Alfred Dickinson, son of H. B. Dickinson, of Vancouver.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Dickinson, entered the drawing room to the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," played by Miss Marie White. She looked very charming in a pretty gown of sand and cream and carried a bouquet of orange and sweet peas. During the signing of the register, Miss Marie White was the bridesmaid.

The bride's getting-away attire consisted of a navy blue tulle and lace gown, trimmed with white lace. Her hair was of a soft wavy style. The happy couple left on the midnight train for Lake Louise, where they will spend several days on their honeymoon. Victoria and Seattle.

INVITING NEGOTIATIONS

The dispatches represent the new chancellor at Berlin as being somewhat less stiff-necked than his predecessor about striking a bargain with France as to the payment of reparations claims. It cannot be said that his statement to the press goes far to show the difference. The principle is reaffirmed that the evacuation of the Ruhr is the condition upon which Germany is willing to "make a trade." The new chancellor does not, however, say definitely that French troops must be withdrawn before the talking can begin. Perhaps that is where he leaves the diplomatic game ajar.

MOVING THE LIMITS

A New York judge has upheld the seizure of foreign ships which loiter along the three-mile limit and dump cargoes of liquor into rum-running launches which carry it ashore under cover of darkness. As a result the U. S. treasury is richer by a fine of $30,000, collected from the owners of a British vessel which was taken into custody a year ago. There will not of course be war or rumors of war in consequence, though the diplomats are likely to begin where the courts leave off. A couple of months ago Washington invited Great Britain to make a treaty widening the territorial waters of the republic from three miles to fifteen. The response was in the negative. Now the United States is in effect widening the strip on its own motion, and leaving Britain and other foreign powers to accommodate themselves to the change.

THE MAJOR ISSUE

The British Columbia appeal to the privy council asks that freight rates be reduced to enable the Vancouver sugar refinery to compete on equal terms with Montreal refiners, and wholesalers and manufacturers at the coast to do business on the same basis as their eastern competitors in the prairie country. The government of this province joined in the appeal and will no doubt bear its share of the expense. The gain might be cheap at the price, but a good deal more public interest would be aroused if there was also an effort being made to get the rates on Alberta grain to Vancouver cut down to the level with the rate to Fort William, distance considered. The lowest possible charges are of course desirable on what we have to import, but the matter of supreme importance just now is to get the grain rates reduced to a figure that will leave the farmer something with which to buy imports.

NATURE TAKES A HAND

A Forestry official of the Dominion Government says the forest is invading the prairie, and that during the last dozen years the timber line in the Western provinces has moved out into the open country for a distance of from 60 to 100 miles. The main reason no doubt is that settlement has checked the prairie fire, and given trees a chance to grow wherever the wind may carry them and drop them in the favorable soil. The pioneers of the older provinces destroyed the forests. In the prairie country they are creating forests without meaning to, by keeping down the enemy that swept the plains clear of trees in the long gone ages and kept them clear. That incidental result of his operations will be welcome to the prairie farmer. A clump of trees here will improve the landscape, provide wind-breaks for crops and stock, and where the growth becomes extensive it will sensibly affect the moisture supply. Tree belts are needed on prairie farms, and that nature is taking a hand in providing them, with no expense to the farmers, ought to be good news.

THE LAKE CARRIERS ANNOUNCE A STRIKE

The grain board has been officially informed by the associated managers of United States Shipping lines that their boats will not carry Canadian grain down the great lakes this fall. This confirms a Fort William dispatch of last week, which said that the American owners refused to operate their vessels under the new freight rates law. In their statement the managers say that their boats are not exclusively or even mainly grain carriers, and only take cargoes of wheat when "open competition" makes it worth while; that is to say, when it pays better to carry wheat than other things. Parliament, they argue, has taken wheat out of the list of commodities which are thus open to handling on a competitive basis, and they do not care to do business under the changed conditions.

The explanation was evidently drawn up by somebody who knew how to state a case. Put another way, the apparent facts look quite different. Last fall the Canadian and American vessel owners, working on the basis of an understanding, boosted the rates on grain to three times the normal charge. Naturally they would like to do the same thing to the grain growers and grain dealers again this fall. But parliament intervened and put the control of lake freight rates in the hands of the grain board. The Canadian shippers do not care to flaunt the public authority of their country, perhaps for prudential reasons. But Ottawa has no terrors for the American end of the combination, and the U. S. shippers promptly announce that they will not carry grain at all if they cannot hold up the owners for whatever they can be made to pay. The declaration that they will only operate under conditions of "free and open competition" sounds good, much too good to be true. There wasn't any competition in the grain carrying trade last year, except competition in jacking up the freight rates. And there would not be any competition this year if parliament had stood pat and allowed the rates to be set by collusive or coincident action of the ship owners. With all deference, our friends at Cleveland are not standing out because they are not permitted to compete with the Canadian lines, but because they are not allowed to combine with them, or to continue a policy of consistent and intelligent rate boosting which produced precisely the same effect. It is clear enough that parliament's intervention has not brought happy results, since it threatens to produce a grain blockade surpassing all precedents. But while the method was a misadventure, action of some kind was plainly needed if the grain trade was to be rescued from the great lakes pirates and conducted in a way that would give the producer a fair chance to make a living and the dealer a fair chance to secure a return on his operations.

The sufficiency of the explanation, however, is not the important matter. The vital fact is that the U. S. ship owners say they will not help to carry out this season's crop. If they stay out of the trade not more than one-quarter of the Western wheat crop can be got across the lakes before they freeze. Three-quarters of the crop will in that case have to lie in the terminal and lateral elevators, in farmers' granaries, and in the open fields, all winter. Alberta being the largest elevator of the wheat-growing provinces, and its crop the latest to mature, it goes without saying that the Alberta farmer will be the hardest hit if that situation develops and no relief is extended to him. As the matter now stands it practically means that no Alberta wheat can be got out over the eastern route this fall. In any case that prospect would entitle the farmers of this province to expect action of some kind on the part of the Dominion government to save them, and all other interests in the province, from disaster. But as parliament contributed to bring about the threatened blockade, unintentionally, the obligation upon the Federal authority is more than usually strong. The lake carriers have the trade at their mercy apparently so far as the eastern route is concerned, and they say they mean to engineer a tie-up. But they do not control the Pacific ocean, nor the National railway that leads from Alberta to Vancouver and Prince Rupert. If the rates to these Pacific ports from Alberta were reduced to a parity with the rates to Fort William, the Alberta farmer would at least be given a chance to get some considerable part of his crop to market during the fall and winter. And unless that is done the Alberta crop will have to stay in the province until spring, or it must be marketed at a cost approximately as great as though the government suspended the recent control legislation and allowed the lake carriers to impose what rates they please.

The clearly defined prospect is that the action of parliament has shut the Alberta crop out of the world's market. That being the case, it is up to the government to take the only other action possible to relieve the situation and to prevent a calamity befalling this province in spite of the fact, in part because of the fact, that it has the biggest wheat crop it ever produced.

"LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON"

A policeman, to Young America along Atlantic City, boardwalk, means a man who goes along ordering women mothers to don modest clothes. So what was more natural, when Edward Mather got a policeman's uniform for a birthday present, than for him to approach Mary Walsh with a curt order to "roll up your socks?"

WILL HE SEND HER TO DEATH?

Twelve-year-old Raymond Taylor, above, is counted on as a stellar witness in the case of Mrs. Nettie Chan Taylor, manager of six children, held on a charge of murder at Watertown, N.Y., for the killing of her husband Frank. The boy's story may decide whether his mother, also shown above, lives or dies.

Household Duties Made Lighter

Natural Gas for Heat and Fuel in the home simplifies household duties so much that it gives them a different aspect

IF THE HOUSEWIFE is doing her own household work, the Gas will lighten the labor very materially. If the housewife pays a maid to do the housework, Gas will lighten the maid's duties to a great extent.

Whether the Housewife or the Maid does the cooking, Natural Gas will minimize as far as possible the monotony and drudgery of the daily tasks in the kitchen.

With Natural Gas for heating, either in the furnace or in the open grate, the fire is a clean one, and there are no ashes and dust through the house every time the fire is shaken down.

The daily "once-over" with the dust mop and dust rag is not necessary when you use Gas for Heating, and this reduces to a minimum one very important household duty.

A number of household duties will be eliminated; and many others will be lightened.

MRS. EDMONTON HOUSEWIFE: "I want you to think over these matters, and when you decide to put Gas into your Home, call us up and our representative will courteously explain to you any of the points on which you may be in doubt regarding Natural Gas cooking and heating. Or call at our store and see our wide line of up-to-date Gas Appliances."
